Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its fifth session from 4 to 15 May 2009. The review of Chile was held at the 9th meeting on 8 May 2009. The delegation of Chile was headed by H.E. Mr. José Antonio Viera Gallo, Minister and Secretary General of the Presidency of Chile. At its meeting held on 12 May 2009, the Working Group adopted the present report on Chile.
2. On 8 September 2008, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Chile: Cuba, Qatar and Senegal
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1, the following documents were issued for the review of Chile:
 - (a) A national report submitted in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/CHL/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR), in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/CHL/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR, in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/5/CHL/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Argentina, Czech Republic, Denmark, Germany, Hungary, Latvia, the Netherlands, Sweden and the United Kingdom and the Northern Ireland was transmitted to Chile through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. SUMMARY OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE REVIEW PROCESS

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. At the 9th meeting, on 8 May 2009, Mr. José Antonio Viera Gallo, Minister and Secretary General of the Presidency of Chile introduced the national report. He noted that in 1990, Chile embarked upon the reconstruction of a democratic system based on respect for fundamental freedoms and human rights - civil, political, economic, social and cultural -, valuing their universality, indivisibility and interdependence. Accordingly, it adopted a policy aimed at balancing economic growth and human development, providing a fruitful equilibrium between market and State.
6. Simultaneously, Chile set off the search for truth, justice and reparation with regard to the massive and systematic human rights violations perpetrated during a dictatorship which lasted for 17 years.
7. A thorough modernization of the judicial system was carried through, including the Penal Process Reform, the reform of the juvenile justice, the family court reform and the labor law reform, and a Prison System Improvement. A project for a new Code of Military Justice is being prepared.

8. Other significant reforms worth to be noted are the abolishment of the death penalty in the Penal Code and in the Code of Military Justice in times of peace; norms on freedom of expression, the new cult law that warrants religious freedom, and the norms on transparency and accountability with the subsequent creation of the Transparency Council as autonomous Government institution. It said a bill against discrimination is being discussed upon in Congress.

9. The recent typification of the crimes of genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes will allow the ratification of the Rome Statute. The approval process of the United Nations Convention for the Protection of All Persons against Forced Disappearance (CED) by the Parliament is also at a very advance stage.

10. Aware of the valuable contribution of its aboriginal populations to shaping the Chilean society, the democratic governments of Chile have made endeavors to deepen the recognition of their rights and promote their identity, establishing the historical truth about their contribution to the development of the nation and redressing the unfair treatment they have been given during centuries. Constitutional recognition of the indigenous populations is a process under discussion in Congress subject to wide consultation with the indigenous communities.

11. A Social Pact for Multi-culturality, under the name “Re-Conocer” (Re-cognition) has been put into place. A land restitution program has been established: 500,000 hectares of land handed over to indigenous communities, for the benefit of 22,000 families. A law on the rights of indigenous communities in coastal areas was adopted.

12. Chile is working on the implementation of the recently ratified ILO Convention number 169 on Indigenous and Tribal Populations in Independent Countries.

13. Chile has strongly progressed in legal, political and cultural aspects of the gender issue: a National Women’s Service has therefore been created, an increase of women’s participation in the labor market reaching over 40 per cent of the labor force. For the first time in history a woman occupies the post of Head of State and Government.

14. The Social Protection System has permitted to face the present economic and financial crisis with solidarity. In this regard, President Bachelet explicitly committed herself to maintaining and increasing the resources attributed to this system. The laws on increasing unemployment insurance and on encouraging employment of young people with a special subsidy grant are conclusive proofs of our affirmation. Poverty fell from 38.6 per cent in 1990 to 13.7 per cent in 2006 and the population below poverty line fell from 13 per cent in 1990 to only 3.2 per cent in 2006. These figures eloquently reflect the progress of Chilean families.

15. The Government said it was set to create a National Human Rights Institution (NHRI), based on the Paris Principles and also elaborating a National Human Rights Plan, and announced Chile’s decision to extend an open and permanent invitation to all special procedures of the Human Rights Council to visit the country.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

16. During the inter-active dialogue, statements were made by 51 delegations.

17. A number of delegations thanked Chile for the comprehensiveness of the national report, and its open and frank presentation. Statements were made welcoming Chile’s commitment to the UPR process and its constructive and cooperative participation in the Human Rights Council.

18. A number of States welcomed Chile for the ratification of the major international human rights instruments, including ICCPR-OP2 and the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (OP-CPD), and for announcing a standing invitation for all Special Procedures. A number of delegations expressed appreciation of Chile's comprehensive legal and institutional framework for the promotion and protection of human rights; for being one of the most successful examples of democratic transition and consolidation from a 17-year-long authoritarian regime and also for its efforts to seek truth, justice and reparation with regard to the massive and systemic violations of human rights committed in the past. Some states noted Chile's economic growth with social equity, its successful social policies to combat poverty, noting that Chile had already achieved most of the Millennium Development Goals (MDG).

19. Algeria enquired about the protection of freedom of religion and belief in Chilean legislation. It recommended to (a) give particular attention to the indigenous peoples when implementing poverty reduction and poverty alleviation programmes and that it works towards the elimination of any discriminatory measures applied to them; (b) take effective measures to eliminate the many obstacles that prevent women from entering the labour market and include in its legislation the principle of equal pay for equal work and ensure that this principle is scrupulously observed by employers; and (c) guarantee effective access to education for all children especially those from indigenous communities, refugee children and children whose families live in rural areas and /or below the poverty line and take effective measures to fight against the factors behind their exclusion from the educational system.

20. China asked what specific experiences Chile could share with developing countries in achieving MDGs. It asked how the government was addressing the quality and quantity of homes and urban environmental protection under its state housing-subsidy schemes.

21. Norway welcomed the recent ratification of the ILO Convention 169, enquiring as to the degree of its practical implementation. It recommended to (a) intensify its work to improve the situation of its indigenous population; (b) further efforts should be made and specific targets set to decrease the number of incidents of domestic violence, in particular it recommended that Chile further strengthen the mechanisms and institutions protecting women from domestic violence; (c) continue to reform and upgrade its detention system in order to improve the situation of inmates in prisons.

22. Malaysia asked how inequalities in the standard of living between urban and rural areas were being addressed. It recommended to (a) expedite efforts to establish a NHRI in conformity with the Paris Principles; (b) undertake comprehensive study on the causes and extent of trafficking in persons in Chile, taking into account the origin, transit and destination countries; (c) undertake necessary measures to combat the problem of trafficking and exploitation of prostitution, including through national legislation; and (d) continue strengthening efforts in poverty alleviation, including through programs for indigenous people.

23. Brazil enquired specifically about women and children and indigenous people. It also requested details of Chile's experience in ensuring access to truth and historical memory, and the specific areas where technical assistance would be welcomed. It recommended to (a) consider the ratification of the Rome Statutes of the International Criminal Court (ICC) and of CED; (b) give greater impetus to a policy to prevent combat and eradicate torture, including the adoption of a definition of torture in accordance with Article 1 of the CAT; (c) continue its effort to fight against impunity and human rights violations, with particular care being paid to the rights of indigenous peoples; and (d) implement the voluntary human rights targets approved in resolution 9/12 of the Human Rights Council.

24. Sweden recommended to (a) continue and strengthen the efforts with a view to find a solution that respects the land rights of the indigenous groups and ensures a legal protection of their human rights. Noting that the Committee on the Rights of the Child had urged Chile to review its complete criminalization of abortion, it recommended to (b) further efforts to ensure that the abortion laws are brought in line with Chile's human rights obligations. Welcoming proposals to discuss a new law against discrimination, Sweden recommended (c) that discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation and gender identity be prohibited by law and included in equality programmes and policies.

25. Netherlands requested more details on the proposed anti-discrimination law pending in Parliament. It recommended to (a) seek accountability for abuses by the police and ensure that civilian authorities investigate, prosecute and try human rights abuses by police; (b) take the necessary measures to prevent outlawing or penalizing legitimate protest activities or social demands by indigenous organizations and peoples and review ways to amend the Anti terrorism Act 18.314 according to recommendations of the Human Rights Committee; (c) that discrimination on the grounds of sexual orientation and gender identity is prohibited by law and included in equality programmes and policies and that the Yogyakarta principles are applied as a guide to assist policy development; and that Chile (d) ratify the Optional protocol to the CEDAW.

26. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland recommended to (a) establish an effective National Preventative Mechanism within the one year deadline established by the OPCAT, and to hold early civil society consultations on the sort of mechanism that would be most appropriate for Chile (b) to take further steps to address discrimination against women and people belonging to vulnerable groups including children, minorities and indigenous people.

27. Egypt asked how Chile is managing the delicate balance between ensuring truth and justice and establishing harmony and reconciliation. Egypt also enquired as to the measures being taking to ensure the full integration of the different components of its society, including the Arab community, while preserving their cultural and social rights.

28. Japan referred to the concerns raised about inadequate educational access for indigenous children, refugees and those living in poverty and rural areas. It supported recommendations for improvement offered by the Committee on the Rights of the Child, also inquiring about Chile's efforts to address human trafficking. It recommended to (a) make further efforts to develop and implement appropriate legislative and administrative measures to provide equal employment opportunities for men and women and to address the issue of the wage gap.

29. Mexico recommended to (a) review and if necessary modify the legislation to ensure the right of every person not to be discriminated against and in particular for the elimination of any form of discrimination against women, (b) the realization of the principles established in the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples and the full implementation of the recently ratified ILO Convention 169, particularly ensuring the participation of indigenous peoples in the political sphere and to proceed with the demarcation and titling of land referred to in its report; (c) The institutional strengthening of the judicial protection to fully guarantee human rights as recognized by its Constitution.

30. Denmark recommended to (a) take all necessary steps to implement all aspects of ILO Convention 169. While enquiring about the status of the process towards constitutional recognition of the indigenous populations, it recommended Chile (b) to take and pursue this constitutional recognition within a reasonable time without leaving out the consultations mentioned in the presentation. It also recommended that Chile (c) ensure full and effective consultation of indigenous communities before granting licenses for the economic exploitation of disputed land, enquiring about the actions taken by to implement this recommendation also voiced by the Human Rights Committee in 2007.

31. Azerbaijan recommended to (a) put an end to trials of civilians by military courts; (b) fully investigate the alleged cases of torture, ill-treatment, and excessive use of force committed by police and security forces and bring the perpetrators to justice; (c) fully investigate the alleged cases of arrest and deportation of journalists and filmmakers depicting the problems of the Mapuche people; (d) strengthen its measures to combat violence against women and reduce underrepresentation of women, including in the labour market; (e) tackle the problem of street children and child labour, as well as discrimination against indigenous children, (f) undertake effective steps to fight human trafficking, including by enacting specific legislation, and (g) continue its efforts to solve the problems of indigenous peoples, in particular their land issues and ensure that the Counter-Terrorism Act not be undermined their rights.

32. The Syrian Arab Republic noted that Chile was taking quick and confident steps in fulfilling its international commitments and pledges, and had also played an important role in implementing the Council's mandate. It recommended to (a) continue its efforts in modernising the justice system.

33. Austria recommended (a) intensify efforts to demarcate and restore land and to systematically consult with indigenous before granting licenses for economic exploitation; (b) introduce new legislation in order to further strengthen the rights of indigenous peoples. Austria raised its concerns with penal sentences for children aged below 16 and even 14 and recommended Chile (c) take all necessary steps to ensure that persons below the age of 18 are under all circumstances tried by a specialised juvenile justice system and that the best interest of the juvenile offenders are given the highest priority so they can successfully be reintegrated into society. The deprivation of liberty of children should only be used as a measure of last resort.

34. New Zealand recommended to (a) ensure indigenous groups are able to express their view, have access to relevant political and decision-making processes and are provided with the support necessary to meaningfully engage on issues that affect them. It also recommended that Chile (b) strengthen measures to counter discriminatory attitudes in society, including through public education and equality initiatives, and legislative measures to prevent discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. Noting pending legislation on reform of the binominal electoral system, establishment of a NHRI and gender equality, It recommended to (c) commit to enact this legislation, by the end of 2010.

35. Switzerland recommended to (a) adopt and implement effective laws to prevent, suppress and eliminate discrimination against women and to combat domestic violence; (b) adapt the military justice system to international standards so that it guarantees the right to a fair trial, adding that civilians must not be brought before military courts. It also recommended Chile (c) not apply the Law 18.314, known as the Anti-Terrorism Act, for acts related to the claims of indigenous peoples.

36. Bangladesh recommended to (a) establish an independent human rights commission in accordance with the Paris Principles to reinforce the Government's commitment to the promotion and protection of human rights; (b) undertake appropriate electoral and legislative reforms to enhance the scope for political representation of the indigenous people, particularly women; (c) provide adequate policy and institutional support to address the marked disparities in the socio-economic indicators between the indigenous and non-indigenous populations; (d) expedite the investigation and trial of the cases of gross human rights violation cases committed during the past military dictatorship to ensure adequate compensation and reparations for the victims and their families; and (e) protect the right of family being the natural and fundamental group of society based upon the stable relationship between a man and a woman, as enshrined in Article 16 of UDHR.

37. Finland recommended to (a) review its legislation criminalizing the termination of pregnancies in all circumstances, including in cases of rape, incest and situations where the life of the mother is at risk. Adequate information on family planning and the regulation of fertility should be publically available. It recommended that Chile (b) promote a constructive dialogue between authorities and indigenous people and their organizations. The participation of indigenous people in the formulation and implementation of laws and programmes affecting their lives should be promoted and resources provided to this end.

38. Germany enquired about the way the civil society has been made part of the process to establish an NHRI. It also enquired on cooperation with the local OHCHR Office in the country. Germany recommended to (a) ensure full compliance with all obligations assumed under the International Covenant on political and Civil Rights as well as under all other international human rights treaties to which it is a State Party and to revise domestic legislation that may still be incompatible with these obligations.

39. Turkey asked for more information on the legislative actions that need to be taken in order to repeal the current joint property marital regime. Taking note of the views expressed by the Committee of the Rights of the Child on access to education for indigenous peoples, Turkey encouraged Chile to increase the budget allocations to education with a view to overcoming this problem. Turkey inquired on the level of advancement regarding the establishment of a human rights mechanisms in conformity with the Paris Principles.

40. The United States asked if there were other efforts underway to reduce the level of domestic violence against women and how the government would sustain and expand these good efforts. It recommended to (a) work with relevant NGOs to create programs to educate law enforcement officials, judges etc. on domestic violence as a serious issue that should be remedied through the legal system, and not kept hidden in the domestic sphere.

41. Morocco highlighted the establishment of the Mohammed VI Center for the dialogue of civilizations in the Chilean city of Coquimbo. It asked to be informed on the value added of two draft laws on the question of migration and on the refugee status compared to existing instruments and the implementation of the International Convention on the Rights of All Migrant Workers and their families (ICRMW). It recommended to (a) establish a national institution for the promotion and protection of human rights in accordance with the Paris Principles, and (b) strengthen and boost the experience it already has on reforming the educational system by promoting a human rights culture, through its integration into school curricula, particularly in rural areas.

42. India commented that some concern had been expressed about the need to expedite the establishment of a NHRI in conformity with the Paris Principles, and the establishment of an autonomous Office of the Ombudsman. It requested the Chilean delegation to share more information on the subject, and on difficulties faced by Chile in increasing the participation of women in its labour force.

43. The Republic of Korea considered Chile's path toward democracy and its democratic government's efforts to uphold human rights as good practice for other countries to follow. It asked for information on Chile's experience in handling the balance between truth and justice on the one hand and reconciliation on the other.

44. Nigeria noted the establishment of the National Office for Returnees aimed at facilitating the reintegration of political exiles and the implementation of policies on equality before the law and non-discrimination against vulnerable groups. It recommended (a) speedy passage of the bills on the establishment of a NHRI and office of the Ombudsman, as these would enhance the promotion and protection of human rights for all Chileans.

45. Chile indicated there is a text currently under review to establish recognition of indigenous peoples in the country's fundamental charter in virtue of which the multicultural nature of Chilean society will be recognized, as well as the collective and individual rights of indigenous peoples, in particular the protection of their land and water resources, their participation in decision-making processes and the promotion of their cultures and traditions. This important step is result of a wide-ranging process of national consultation with indigenous peoples, since it is through dialogue that Chile hopes incorporate the opinions of all society, especially indigenous peoples.

46. Political participation of indigenous peoples in Chile is happening in two ways: through Constitutional recognition of their right to participate, in consultations on the future draft laws that will create an independent entity called the National Council of Indigenous Peoples and in the proposals of special quotas for their participation in the National Congress and Regional Councils.

47. Chile's antiterrorist law cannot be applied on the basis of ethnic, religious or political considerations, but only in accordance with the gravity of the crime committed. Chile reiterated its commitment to full and transparent investigation of cases presented for disproportionate use of public force and the application of sanctions according to the law.

48. Chile's Indigenous Law, which enshrines access to the right to possess land and water of indigenous communities, has been applied through the Land and Water Policy, which recognizes ancestral possession of these resources. This procedure has been recognized by Indigenous peoples and society in general as an effective mechanism. Chile's challenge lies in the fact that together with the acquisition and handover of land and water, Chile must generate methods of productive development in line with the reality of each indigenous group.

49. Chile, in the framework of its new indigenous policy called "Re-conocer" has an integral plan of participatory implementation of Convention 169, through consultations on issues which may affect indigenous communities and a Code of Responsible Conduct for private and public investment. Chile will follow the recommendations which have been made about adopting and achieving the objectives of the Universal Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, an important political instrument.

50. The National Corporation of Indigenous Development of Chile and the Ministry of Education have developed programs of Bilingual Intercultural Education. Furthermore, the General Law of Education, recently approved, includes the protection and promotion of indigenous languages, promoting generation of pedagogical methods and curricular adaptation of educational institutions in Chile.

51. Chile has been reducing the levels of poverty and extreme poverty of its population. The gap between Indigenous Poverty and Non-Indigenous Poverty has dropped and Chile's efforts aim to reduce this gap even more with the development of pertinent policies.

52. Chile's police service is constantly concerned with avoiding inappropriate behavior. Every accusation is looked into. All police officers in Chile must take and pass courses on human rights, and all accusations against the police are investigated.

53. Chile is carrying out a process of reforming the military justice system; including taking away the competence that military law currently has over civilians. Chile has enriched the law on "due obedience" to "reflexive obedience" that allows the subordinate to disobey an order if it means the committing of a crime. The objection of conscience to military service is available to relatives of the victims of human rights violations of the past.

54. Between 1990 and today, Chile has made progress in the reduction of maternal mortality. In this period, the rate has reduced from 120 to less than 50 deaths for each 100,000 live births. On the issue of abortion, the rate has gone from 60 annual deaths, to 17.

55. Through programs of family planning, access to modern contraceptive methods has increased by 34 per cent between 1990 and 2006 and full obstetric services are accessible, including for complications arising from abortions. Drugs for emergency contraception are available by express instruction from the Ministry of Health. In Chile, forced sterilization is illegal. Induced abortion is forbidden in Chilean legislation and this topic is part of society's current debate.

56. As recently presented to CAT, in Chile, medical care is not conditioned by a statement of responsibility to the origin of the disease or wound that the patient suffers. A professional can be charged with refusal to provide care, detailed in the Penal Code. The Ministry of Health has instructed that although is illegal, women should not be forced to make a statement of responsibility before receiving medical care as the result of injury through abortion.

57. Chile is currently working on a draft law, with political support from the Government, opposition and civil society, to improve the regime of marital partnership.

58. In 1991, Chile created the National Service for Women, in charge of the process of elimination of discrimination against women. Ending violence against women is a priority for the Chilean President who established the Gender Agenda 2006-2010 as a technical-political instrument to mainstream gender into public policies. Chile has established 58 Centers for Women and 16 shelters.

59. Corporal punishment of children is forbidden in Chile and as stipulated in the Civil Code, discipline must be exercised in conformity with the law and the CRC.

60. Chile's migration policy is based on respect for human rights of migrants, regardless of migratory status. In 2007, Chile undertook its second regularization process, allowing 50,000 foreigners to obtain residency permits and thus accede to employment opportunities and social security. Given the high migratory flows received, Chile is working on a new law on migration, in accordance with CMW.

61. On refugee matters, Chile has maintained a policy of solidarity meant to integrate refugees and asylum seekers. It has participated since 1997 with UNHCR in resettlement programs and received people from more than 10 countries, most recently, 116 Palestinian citizens.
62. On trafficking in persons, Chile has ratified the Palermo Protocols and is in the process of drafting a law to typify both crimes, as well as establish measures of assistance to victims and prevention.
63. Bolivia asked if Chile could comment on the level of the interaction and participation of indigenous peoples in the adoption of laws which are of concern to them in Congress, and also on the measures that will be taken to implement ILO Convention 169. Bolivia recommended to (a) consider promoting a more effective participation by indigenous peoples in political decision-making; and (b) continue strengthening those mechanisms which protect the rights of women, especially indigenous women.
64. Guatemala recommended to (a) continue efforts, in consultation with indigenous peoples, towards addressing the issue of the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, through the application of ILO Convention 169 and the Universal Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples; and (b) continue with the legal or administrative measures they deem appropriate to ensure equality between men and women in all aspects. Guatemala noted that Chile only recognizes undocumented migrants' access to health care and education in some special situations, asking how Chile intends to ensure that all migrants, including undocumented immigrants, access health and education services.
65. Argentina recommended to (a) continue its efforts to eliminate all obstacles standing in the way of justice; (b) ratify the convention regarding war crimes and accept the statute of the ICC; (c) continue its efforts to review the competence of military justice when it comes to trying civilians and to reform the Code of Military Justice accordingly; and (d) ratify the Convention and accept the competence of the Committee regarding forced disappearances. It congratulated Chile for ratifying the Inter-American Convention on Violence Against Women and recommended to (e) reform the marital partnership to ensure compliance with its various international obligations acquired.
66. France asked what timeframe the Chilean authorities envisage for the revision of the Amnesty Law of 1978. It also said women, sexual minorities and indigenous peoples continue to be victims of different types of discrimination at various levels, asking how Chile intends to improve this situation. It recommended to (a) review the provisions governing the operation of military courts in peacetime to comply with international standards, (b) ratify CED; (c) ratify the Rome Statute of the ICC.
67. The Holy See noted that Chile had committed itself to the improvement of the situation of the indigenous population in the country, lands had been restituted, but expressed concern that the speed of the process remained slow. It asked how the Chilean government intended to respond to this challenge. The Holy See recommended to (a) continue to adhere to the cultural and religious values which make up the identity of the country in defence of the right to life and in defence of the right of the family.

68. Lebanon recommended to (a) maintain their commitment and continue the actions they have undertaken in that direction including the setting up of institutions and commissions entrusted with the task of safeguarding human rights. Lebanon asked for clarifications concerning the status of the 1967 Minors Act, and the new social policies focused more on development and the difficulties confronted in moving away from the previous welfare system.

69. Italy recommended to (a) intensify efforts for the full respect of the rights of the Mapuche people and their protection from discriminatory practices; (b) proceed to the abrogation of the Amnesty Law put in place during the military regime and (c) consider total elimination of the death penalty from the normative system in Chile, including all norms of the Military Justice Code that still provide for it in certain cases.

70. Pakistan commented that some concerns, such as continued competence of military courts over civilians, validity of the Amnesty Act of 1978 to crimes against humanity and constitutional non-recognition of the indigenous population had found resonance among civil society. It recommended, in line with the expressed commitment of the present administration, to (a) expedite the legislative process to create the NHRI, in accordance with Paris Principles, as well as the proposed Office of the Ombudsman; and (b) enact necessary legislation and ensure its effective enforcement to provide requisite protection to all forms of violence against women, their right to equal remuneration and their enhanced participation in public decision-making.

71. Palestine noted that Chile has established a system to monitor the implementation of recommendations emanating from the national human rights bodies. It noted that Chile is a party to the "Mexican Action Plan", a program of solidarity resettlement for refugees under which hundreds of Palestinian refugees were welcomed in the country since 2007, and provided with all conditions for perfect integration, commending and encourage Chile for this. It recommended to (a) pursue its commitments to the promotion and protection of the universal values of human rights, especially through the strengthening of the rule of law.

72. Peru, regarding to the Law of Transparency and Access to Information which came into effect on 20 April last, asked for more information regarding the exceptions contemplated and the scope covered. Peru also asked about policies and actions that Chile has developed to ensure the full enjoyment of human rights of migrants. It recommended (a) the prompt creation of a NHRI in accordance with the Paris Principles, and (b) the early approval of the National Human Rights Action Plan.

73. Uzbekistan recommended to (a) take appropriate measures to prevent torture and to ensure that all allegations of torture are properly and independently investigated. It also urged that the Law adopted to define torture in accordance with Article 1 of the Convention against Torture (CAT); (b) thoroughly investigate all forms of human rights violations particularly of those who were arrested in the course of police operations; (c) take proper legal and administrative measures and adopt the national Plan of action to ensure full observance for rights of indigenous peoples; (d) appropriately fight and eradicate the worst forms of child labour; (e) ratify the International Convention Against the Recruitment, Use, Financing and Training of Mercenaries; and (f) establish an institution in accordance with the Paris Principles

74. Nicaragua applauded the Chile now occupies the second place in Latin America and the Caribbean in UNDP's Human Development Index. Nicaragua however noted that Chile had not established a NHRI in accordance with the Paris Principles, which must enjoy full independence from other state institutions. Nicaragua recommended to (a) accelerate this process of reform. It also recommended Chile (b) approve without delay a reform to the military code, allowing its judicial system to be in accordance with international human rights standards. Nicaragua asked for more information on Chile's program of concession on infrastructure of prisons.

75. Ukraine appreciated, inter alia, the establishment of the comprehensive child protection scheme, and the efforts to strengthen constitutional provisions on equality between men and women. Ukraine recommended to (a) increase efforts to ensure implementation of legislation guaranteeing the principles of non-discrimination and adopting comprehensive strategy to eliminate all forms of discrimination, particularly gender-based; and that Chile (b) continue and strengthen its efforts to bring the national legislation, in particular Criminal Code, in line with ratified instruments.

76. Spain recommended to (a) sign and ratify CED; Convention on the applicability of crimes against humanity, war and genocide; and the Rome Statute creating the ICC; (b) the speedy establishment of public institutions to ensure respect for human rights; such as the Ombudsman, which has been debated in parliament since 2008 and the National Institute for Human Rights that is also paralyzed in Congress, (c) improve the situation of women, and ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women (OP-CEDAW), and enact and enforce specific legislation regarding violence against women and ensuring their sexual and reproductive rights; (d) recognize the indigenous peoples in its Constitution, to implement the outstanding recommendations of the United Nations Rapporteur of human rights and fundamental freedoms of indigenous peoples, and recognize their contribution to the Chilean identity as a people; (e) the elimination of application of military jurisdiction to civilians

77. Paraguay urged Chile to (a) continue its efforts to find ways to vindicate human rights of citizens, in particular of the families of the victims of disappearances. Paraguay noted the findings of the Inter-American organs for promotion and protection of human rights asking for further elaboration on the Chilean experience as party to cases brought before these bodies.

78. Ghana noted inter alia, that the establishment of the National Commission on Truth and Reconciliation, and the Forum for Dialogue. It recommended to (a) strengthen the compensation process so that as many victims as possible can benefit from the reparation measures; and (b) speed up the process to establish a NHRI in line with the Paris Principles, an Ombudsman Office and to elaborate a national human rights plan.

79. Equatorial Guinea welcomed, inter alia, the creation of a Special Commission on Indigenous Peoples; and the support for educational system which currently provides free and compulsory schooling at primary and secondary levels; the adoption of a Second Plan on Equal Opportunities for women for 2000-2010 and of a Government Agenda for Gender Equity for 2006-2010. It asked what steps are being taken to combat trafficking and prostitution.

80. Latvia noted the improvements in various social indicators, including the improved coverage in primary and secondary education and the progress made in the area of poverty reduction. Latvia welcomed the decision to extend an open and permanent invitation to all Special Procedures and invited other countries to follow Chile's example.

81. Colombia asked how the compensation to victims recognized by the National Corporation for Compensation and Reconciliation is complemented by compensation ordered by judges after the culmination of processes for violation of human rights during the dictatorship. Colombia recommended to (a) continue ahead with its efforts to achieve the approval in Congress of the Rome Statute. On the trying and punishing of State agents responsible to grave violations of human rights, it recommended to (b) continue providing the judiciary with all resources and support necessary so that the 338 pending criminal cases cited in paragraph 27 of the national report may be resolved.

82. Uruguay noted Chile's work to prevent impunity for past human rights violations based on three pillars: truth, justice and reparation for victims and members of their families. Uruguay recommended to (a) continue and deepen the Second Plan on Equal Opportunities for Men and Women and the Government's Agenda for Gender Equality, to totally eliminate discrimination against women at work, in decision-making positions, in management of marital property and society as a whole; (b) continue and deepen respect for indigenous peoples, recognizing their cultural wealth, opening up participation in national and communitarian issues to them, particularly when it concerns them, such as property and land use, to eliminate any all discrimination against indigenous persons or indigenous communities

83. The Czech Republic recommended (a) provide specific and practical human rights education and training to all prison officers, members of the Carabineros, Policia de Investigaciones, and Gendarmeria, and ensuring their full accountability for any violations of human rights as well as effective access to remedies for victims; and (b) review Art. 373 of the Criminal Code so that it can not be abused for persecution of persons belonging to sexual minorities. It welcomed the introduction of legislation aiming at eradicating violence against women and recommended (c) that it be widely circulated among general public, all cases of violence against women be registered, and all complaints promptly investigated. It recommended (d) that jurisdiction of Military Courts over civilians is ended and all rules of criminal procedure reviewed so that they fully comply with international standards of fair trial, and that the Government provide full support for relevant Bill aimed at ensuring this compliance; (e) the review of antiterrorist law and their application, so that they can not be abused for persecution of persons from the Mapuche community for their political or religious activity; and (f) adopt national refugee legislation to ensure full realization of their rights, in particular protection of the principle of non-refoulement, and pay special attention to measures aimed at protection of vulnerable groups such as women at risk, victims of torture and unaccompanied children.

84. Ecuador emphasized Chile's efforts and political commitment to allocating resources to health, education and poverty reduction programmes, such as "Chile Solidario" and "Plan AUGE". It asked about the actions taken regarding the recommendation of the Committee on the Rights of the Child to guarantee to child refugees, asylum seekers and migrants, the immediate processing of their registration and identification documents so that they would not be deprived of the access to health services and education.

85. Slovenia welcomed, inter alia, the improved social assistance; and enhanced enrolment of poorer children. Slovenia recommended to (a) continue to increase budget allocations to the educational sector; focus on an overall improvement in the quality of education provided, in particular in rural areas, and ensure the expansion of the bilingual intercultural programme for indigenous peoples.

86. Viet Nam commended Chile for its cooperation with the special procedures. Realizing that the protection of the rights of the vulnerable groups in particular indigenous peoples is one of the main challenges that Chile is facing, Viet Nam recommended to (a) continue to strengthen its measures and mechanisms to overcome this challenge.

87. Canada expressed concern that, in select instances, the Government of Chile responded to indigenous people demanding rights by means of police intimidation and the application of Chile's anti-terrorism legislation. It recommended to (a) reinforce its efforts to recognize indigenous rights and to effectively include them in Chile's legal and administrative structure, as well as to address land claims with indigenous peoples and communities through a process of effective dialogue and negotiation. Canada recommended that Chile; (b) amend the appropriate legislation in accordance with its international human rights obligations to address the issue of amnesties for perpetrators of human rights violations; (c) ratify the OP-CEDAW; and (d) that the reforms to the jurisdiction of military tribunals ensure that civilian cases are not heard by military tribunals, in accordance with international human rights standards.

88. Chile stated that although non-discrimination is enshrined in the Constitution, the Chilean Congress is currently discussing a draft law that establishes Measures against Discrimination. Chile has a National Plan against Racism and the Promotion of Non-Discriminatory Best Practices, which includes educational campaigns.

89. Chile carried out reform of the criminal procedure. The Congress is considering a draft proposal to face the problem of prison overcrowding. Chile is working on prison infrastructure and specific measures for adolescents and juvenile justice, including ambulatory sanctions.

90. The Decree on Amnesty which covers the crimes committed between 11 September 1973 and March 1978 has not been applied by Chile's Superior Tribunals of Justice since 1998 in cases of enforced disappearance, extra judicial executions and torture, under the argument that the principles of international law on human rights and humanitarian law have primacy.

91. With regard to compliance with the decision of the Inter-American Court for Human Rights on the case of Mr. Almonacid Arellano, there is an investigation into this grave violation of human rights and Chile's Ministry of Interior is assisting as a concerned party.

92. Chile has implemented various compensation measures for human rights violations of the past; one of the most significant is the implementation of two Truth Commissions: one for victims of enforced disappearance and extrajudicial executions and the other for victims of imprisonment and torture. Important compensation laws have come from the recommendations of these Commissions. Importance has also been given to symbolic reparations, such as memorials to victims and the inauguration at the end of this year of the Museum of Memory and Human Rights, which will include main archives of the military dictatorship from 1973-1990.

93. Chile is complying with the Millennium Development Goals, a very important task for economic and social development.

94. The country is looking forward to the possible visit of the Special Rapporteur on Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. This is a priority for Chile, where all children have a right to education, according to Chile's program for children "Chile Crece Contigo".

95. Chile made a commitment to implement many of the recommendations by its next review.
