Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its twelfth session from 3 to 14 October 2011. The review of Tajikistan was held at the 1st meeting on 3 October 2011. The delegation of Tajikistan was headed by Mr. Bakhtiyor Khudoyarov, Minister of Justice of the Republic of Tajikistan. At its 5th meeting held on 5 October 2011, the Working Group adopted the report on Tajikistan.
2. On 20 June 2011, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Tajikistan: Costa Rica, Mauritius and Thailand.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1, the following documents were issued for the review of Tajikistan:
 - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/12/TJK/1);
 - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/12/TJK/2);
 - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/12/TJK/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Canada, Czech Republic, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Tajikistan through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation considered the universal periodic review as an important instrument to ensure dialogue, improve the fulfilment of the state's commitments in human rights and assess the positive changes as well as problems that the country faced.
6. Despite the challenges the country encountered since its independence, Tajikistan became a full-fledged member of the international community and declared the protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms as a priority in its policy. Tajikistan adhered to the principles of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and acceded to seven core human rights treaties.
7. The Constitution recognized the supremacy of international legal acts over the national legislation. A number of state bodies had been established to implement Tajikistan's international obligations, including the Commission on Ensuring the Fulfilment of International Obligations in the Field of Human Rights. The first Human Rights Ombudsman was appointed in 2009 based on the 2008 Law on the Human Rights Ombudsman.
8. Tajikistan cooperated with the UN human rights treaty bodies. The delegation informed about visits of 3 Special Rapporteurs conducted in the period of 2005-2008 and also about the upcoming visit of the of Special Rapporteur on Adequate Housing as well as about extended invitations by Tajikistan to the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture, the Special Rapporteur of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances and the Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest standards of physical and mental health to visit the country.

9. The Constitution guaranteed everyone the freedom of speech and press and the censorship and persecution for expressed critical views were prohibited. The delegation informed about a number of independent and private media outlets that function in the country, including 127 newspapers, 20 private television channels and 9 private radio stations.
10. Eight political parties and over 2,000 public associations had been registered. To enhance the role of women in society a number of laws and measures for their implementation had been adopted, including the 2005 Law on the state guarantees of equality of men and women and equal opportunities for their realization.
11. The delegation informed about several developments in human rights area, including that: the National Action Plan on Juvenile Justice Reform for 2010-2015 was adopted; the Comprehensive Program on Combating Human Trafficking for 2011-2013 was adopted in addition to the 2004 Law on combating human trafficking.
12. Since independence significant results had been achieved in respect to the enjoyment of the freedom of religion. In 2009, the Law on freedom of conscience and religious associations was adopted to regulate the relations between state and religious associations and legal status of religious associations. The legal system gave no preference to any religious movement or tendency and it permitted no one to impose their ideology on the whole of society.
13. The social protection of the population remained the primary task of the Government. In the past five years the minimum wage and pension had increased by 3 or 4 times respectively and 582,000 new jobs had been created. Furthermore, Tajikistan was one of the pilot countries in the implementation of Millennium Development Goals and thus, under the auspices of the UN, the comprehensive evaluation of the country's needs had been conducted. As a result, the National Development Strategy for 2006-2015 and National Poverty Reduction Strategies had been adopted to ensure stable economic progress and enhance the quality of life of the population.
14. In 2010, the new Law on the social protection of persons with disabilities was adopted and the Government allocated annually additional funds for the higher education of persons with disabilities.
15. The free secondary public education was guaranteed and despite the economic difficulties the Government was continually increasing the financing of the education sector. In 2011, seventeen per cent of the national budget was allocated to the educational sector. In 2001, human rights subject was introduced in secondary schools.
16. The delegation reported on the reforms in criminal codes and that the implementation of a state programme to make the policy in respect of criminal law more humane had been started. The new Criminal Procedure Code was adopted in 2010 to bring it in line with the international human rights standards, including the principles of presumption of innocence and equality of arms. The new Code provided a mechanism for consideration by a court of the legality and justification of detention. The status of defender in the criminal process had also been strengthened.
17. The moratorium on the use of death penalty was introduced and the life imprisonment was intended only as an alternative to the death penalty for the serious offences. The working group was established by the Presidential order to study social and legal aspects of the abolition of the death penalty. In August 2011, the Law on amnesty was - adopted and about 4,000 prisoners were granted amnesty and released from the prisons.

18. In 2011, the Law on the order and conditions of detention of suspects, accused and defendant was adopted, which regulated several important issues regarding detention places, including the obligatory medical examination by the medical officers in places of detention. In 2011 the financing of the penitentiary system had been increased by six times as compared to 2004. Furthermore, a draft amendment to the Criminal Code was developed to introduce a separate article on torture in line with the article 1 of the CAT.
 19. Since 2007, the Government had implemented the judicial and legal reforms to improve laws and procedures regulating the justice system with the aim to further strengthen the judiciary and the status of judges.
 20. An effective legal framework to combat corruption had been established and the Government took comprehensive measures in this area, including the ratification of the UN Convention against Corruption and the adoption of the Law and strategy on the combating corruption and the establishment of the National Council on combating corruption.
 21. Among the achieved results, including the high level of ratification of international human rights and the moratorium on use of death penalty, the Government had still to address a number of problems, including the difficulties caused by the process of transition from planned economy to market relations, issues related to improvement of living standards of the population and raising public awareness on human rights. In this respect, the Government would welcome the continued assistance of the international community to implement the Millennium Development Goals and improve the system of protection and promotion of human rights.
 22. The delegation provided its responses to a number advanced questions, including those on the prohibition of torture and the ratification of the OP-CAT. According to the delegation, the Government undertook a number of measures to combat the use of torture. The law established criminal liability for the use of torture. Under the Code of Criminal Procedure, evidence obtained during initial inquiries and pre-trial investigations through the use of force, coercion, inhuman treatment or other illegal means was considered invalid and might not serve as a basis for a charge. In the past 8 months the Prosecutor's office initiated investigation regarding to 16 cases out of 66 complaints it received from individuals. Over 1,500 police officers were subject to disciplinary sanctions and some of them lost their job for the violations of the freedom from torture. In addition to the Prosecutor's office, Ombudsman also dealt with the issue of the use of torture. The issue of the use of torture was also discussed in the session of the National Security Council by the initiative of the President. Furthermore, as a preventive measure, seminars and training had been organised for judiciary, prosecutor's office and law enforcement agencies.
 23. The delegation stated that inter-ministerial working group was established to study the possibility of the ratification of the OP-CAT by Tajikistan. Additionally, a working group was established to introduce further improvements in the Criminal Code. In this respect amendments were drafted to introduce a definition of torture in line with CAT.
 24. In response to the questions on advancement of women's role in society the delegation informed that about 24 per cent of civil servants were women and 81 out of 381 judges were women. Training was provided to women working in central and local government bodies. A gender network was established for women involved in agriculture to assist and enhance their entrepreneurship and the Presidential program was established to provide grants to women entrepreneurs.

25. In respect to questions regarding domestic violence, the delegation informed that a legal services and hot lines functioned to support women and girls who were victims of domestic violence and as a result, over hundred girls received legal, psychological, social and rehabilitation services in the framework of the project implemented by the Committee on Women issues and Families at the Government since 2009. Based on the decision of the Ministry of Interior, inspectors specialised on the issues of domestic violence were introduced.
26. Regarding the religious freedom, the delegations stated that the 2009 Law on conscience and religious organisations was adopted with the view of international human rights instruments and the Constitution as well as recommendations of the UN Special Rapporteur on religious freedom. The Law on the Responsibility of Parents for the Upbringing and Education of Children was adopted based on a broad consultation of citizens and stakeholders in order to protect children's rights to education and protect them from physical and psychological violence and from being proselytised in line with the requirements of CRC. According to the Law children were entitled to religious education and other type of activities to manifest their religion based on the parents' consent. A state body on the issue of religious freedom was established, which had registered 3,829 religious associations. There were several religious educational institutions functioning and courses on religions were introduced in primary and secondary schools.
27. The domestic legislation that was developed with the view of the Paris Principles provided broad mandate to Commissioner for Human Rights (Ombudsman) for its functioning. The Ombudsman enjoyed full independence from the Government and was entitled to unlimited access to state bodies, army and penitentiary institutions, ask for and received information from state bodies, carry out independent investigation related to the work of state bodies and request to the relevant bodies to initiate disciplinary and criminal measures against officials whose actions resulted in violations of human rights. The Ombudsman in cooperation with NGOs and journalists had started to carry out visits to detention places. In 4 regions of the country a public complaints-reception canter were established.
28. On the independence of the judiciary the delegation informed that that the Constitution and relevant laws guaranteed the independence of the judiciary and set out the functions and terms of appointment of judges. Their length of tenure of judges had been raised, as well as the remuneration of judges and other members of the judiciary. Currently, the question of the lifelong appointment of judges was being examined. The Council of the Justice was a collegial body established to make inter alia proposals for judicial reform, thereby removing the responsibility for those issues from the competence of the executive branch.
29. Regarding defamation laws, the delegation stated that criminal cases had been initiated by the individuals who were slandered or insulted.
30. An inter-ministerial working group had been examining the issue of adhesion to the CRPD, however the 2010 Law on Social Protection of Disabled Persons had already incorporated norms contained in the Convention.
31. In respect to questions on the child labour, the delegation informed that it was regulated by the Labour Code and other relevant laws, including a provision in the Law on education banning the use of pupils and students in agricultural labour during the school year, and was addressed in the national poverty reduction strategy. Tajikistan noted that the high level of unemployment impacted on child labour, with many children taking on jobs, often ordered by their parents. Child labour was also included in the future poverty reduction strategies.

32. Regarding rights in administrative arrest, Tajikistan stated that in accordance with the Code of Administrative Offences the rights were the same as for those detained under the Criminal Code or the Code of Criminal Procedure, and would be further enlarged in the law on the code of administrative procedure currently in preparation.
33. Tajikistan stated it was not a country of transit for the human trafficking. An interdepartmental commission had been set up to organize the return of trafficked persons, as well as a specific unit on trafficking within the Ministry of Interior. No case of involvement of government officials in human trafficking had been recorded.
34. As to the question of the access of detainees to an independent doctor, this was guaranteed by the 2010 Law on procedures and conditions of detention.
35. Regarding the question of identity of transgender persons, Tajikistan noted that identity documents were issued on the basis of the Law on civil registration, and that a certificate of a change of gender issued by a medical organization was required.
36. Regarding measures to implement the 2011-2015 national strategy on labour migration of Tajiks abroad, Tajikistan referred to measures to address issues related to health and legal protection of national working abroad. A number of consular representations were already operating in the Russian Federation and in Kazakhstan, which render consular assistance and protection, and there were plans to open additional ones and increase resources allocated thereto.
37. Regarding implementation of the treaty bodies recommendations, Tajikistan referred to the significant changes to legislation, inter alia in the Civil Code, Criminal Code, Criminal Procedural Code and others, as well as reforms in the judiciary and law enforcement.
38. The power to limit civil rights was transferred from the procurator to the judge, and the execution of sentences from the Ministry of the Interior to the Ministry of Justice. The inadmissibility of evidence obtained under torture has been introduced, and in the draft amendments to the Criminal Procedural Code, a separate article was foreseen introducing a definition of torture in line with CAT. The Criminal Code reduced the number of crimes punishable by the death penalty to five.
39. The delegation expressed its disagreement with the assessment that between 33 and 50 per cent of women in Tajikistan experienced physical, physiological or sexual violence as the fact which were in the disposal of the Government contradicted those numbers: only 2 per cent of individuals who applied to 37 advisory centres for help were claimed to be subject of domestic violence.
40. Regarding the issue of death penalty, the President established an inter-ministerial working group on this issue in 2010. Among other undertakings, with the participation of non-governmental organizations and international partners, an international conference was held in May 2011 with the support and cooperation of OSCE. The delegation expressed its belief that the steps undertaken in this regard would assist to decide whether the OP-ICCPR is to be ratified.
41. Regarding concerns expressed about the prosecution of journalists, the delegation mentioned that there had been two such cases in the last 18 months, and that in one case the prosecution was not related to the journalistic work of an individual but related to his extremist activities.
42. The delegation asserted that mass media in Tajikistan were free and that citizens could freely express their views and convictions through them. The number of registered media outlets exceeded those state-owned. In 2011, Parliament had elaborated a draft law on mass media with a view to expanding their scope of activities and freedoms and to ensure also that they provided objective information.

43. The delegation also indicated that, in August 2011, ICRC had been invited to visit detention centres in Tajikistan. The scope of the draft agreement of cooperation with ICRC will be based on the outcome of this visit and international obligations and national legislation of Tajikistan.
44. As to freedom of religion, the delegation explained that the new law on religious activities did not restrict freedom of religion but regulated registration procedures. The law set out a framework for the functioning of religious organizations and guaranteed the freedom of religion. Every citizen had the right to profess any religion or no religion at all, and to participate in religious services and ceremonies. There was no law forbidding women to wear a hijab or to perform prayers in mosques. The latter issue had been subject to a fatwa by religious scholars, in whose affairs the State could not interfere.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

45. During the interactive dialogue, 42 delegations made statements. A number of countries recognized Tajikistan's open participation in the universal periodic review and thanked Tajikistan for preparing a comprehensive national report with the involvement of various government departments and civil society stakeholders. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.
46. Sri Lanka commended the steps taken to improve the quality of education, including the shift towards a 12 year general-education system and asked to have further insights on this transition. It noted that citizens were provided with medical and health care assistance free of charge. It also commended Tajikistan for the measures adopted to ensure public security, and to combat terrorism. Sri Lanka made a recommendation.
47. The Czech Republic expressed appreciation for the constructive participation of Tajikistan in the universal periodic review. It made recommendations.
48. Algeria noted with appreciation the adoption of a moratorium on death penalty. It also acknowledged the problems highlighted in the national report, especially the high level of poverty and encouraged Tajikistan to remain committed in its efforts against drug trafficking. Algeria made recommendations.
49. The Russian Federation noted progress achieved in acceding to international human rights treaties and the harmonization of national legislation in accordance with international norms, the creation of a national human rights institution and the moratorium on the death penalty. It also noted challenges the country faced, including poverty. The Russian Federation made recommendations.
50. France enquired about measures planned to align the legislation with the definition of torture of the CAT. A moratorium had been introduced in 2004 and legislation allowed to commute death sentences, but Tajikistan remained the only country in Central Asia which had not abolished death penalty. It also referred to the numerous incidents of pressures and defamation charged against journalists, and allegations of arbitrary arrests and torture. France made recommendations.
51. China recognized positive measures taken to promote socio-economic development and implementation of the MDGs. China appreciated the poverty reduction strategy, as well as the importance attached to gender equality, the elimination of domestic violence, quality of education, health care services and the rights of persons with - disabilities. Tajikistan had actively engaged in international human rights cooperation. China acknowledged the challenges faced by Tajikistan and called on the international community to provide assistance. It made a recommendation.

52. India noted with interest measures undertaken by Tajikistan in a number of areas, including rising the age of marriage and the moratorium on death penalty. It also welcomed the measures strengthening the judicial branch. However, India acknowledged the insufficient resources that Tajikistan encountered and underlined the need for further technical assistance for the construction of prisons.
 53. Canada, while acknowledging the security challenges and budget constraints, was concerned at restrictions on the practice of religion and freedom of press, conditions of detention and deaths in custody, impunity for allegations of torture and confessions obtained through torture, lack of independence of the judiciary, domestic violence, discrimination against women, child labour, institutionalization of children with disabilities, and incidents regarding LGBT persons. Canada made recommendations.
 54. Hungary noted with appreciation the adoption of the Commissioner for Human Rights Act in 2008. It also commended Tajikistan for the moratorium on the use of the death penalty and for the adoption of the Disabled Persons Act. However it remained concerned by the discrimination still endured by disabled persons, particularly women and children. Hungary made recommendations.
 55. Poland welcomed the cooperation of Tajikistan with the human rights mechanisms and special procedures and the establishment of the Human Rights Ombudsman Institution. However, it noted with concern that Tajikistan was not party to some of the core human rights treaties. It remained concerned by the high level of deaths in custody and by allegations on the use of torture by law enforcement agencies. Poland made recommendations.
 56. Slovakia commended Tajikistan for the high ratification of international human rights instruments and its secondary school human rights education programme. It referred to the cases of deaths in custody and allegations of torture. It also raised concerns at registration procedures for religious organizations, and media censorship. Slovakia made recommendations.
 57. Switzerland indicated that Tajikistan was the last Central Asian country which did not abolish the death penalty. It welcomed the commitment taken by the Ombudsman to visit the detention places and the invitation extended to the Special Rapporteur on torture to visit the country. Switzerland commended Tajikistan for the opening of a migration service. It also expressed its concern about the restrictions to the freedom of media existing in the country. Switzerland made recommendations.
 58. Estonia noted with appreciation that Tajikistan has ratified the main international human rights instruments and made efforts to harmonize its domestic legislation with international law. It praised Tajikistan for having declared a moratorium on the death penalty. Estonia further appreciated the establishment of the Office of the Ombudsman. Estonia made recommendations.
 59. Norway acknowledged the establishment of the Ombudsman and the adoption of the new Code of Criminal Procedure. It expressed concern at increasing restrictions on religious and civil society organizations, and on independent media. It also noted that gender inequalities persisted in all spheres of life. Norway made recommendations.
 60. Turkey positively observed achievements made in the human rights and commended the establishment of the Ombudsman Institution and the introduction of human rights into the secondary education curriculum. It welcomed the strategy to enhance the role - of women, the national actions plans for children and juvenile justice. Turkey made recommendations.

61. Australia commended Tajikistan for the establishment of the Ombudsman Institution and for the ratification of a number of core human rights treaties. It called on Tajikistan to implement commitments under those treaties at domestic level. It welcomed the draft law on domestic violence but remained concerned about reports of violence against women, forced marriages, child labour and trafficking. Other concerns related to the lack of a torture definition and the persistence of death penalty in domestic law. Australia made recommendations.
 62. Germany enquired what steps had been taken to recognize the right to conscientious objection to compulsory military service, improve the conditions of enrolment and provide an alternative civil service. It noted the incompatibility with international standards of a national provision prohibiting unregistered religious activities, observing that the registration requirements prescribed by the "Law on Freedom of Conscience and Religious Associations" were too extensive. Germany made recommendations.
 63. Slovenia asked whether the Tajik government intended to ratify the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR and abolish the death penalty. After expressing concerns on, inter alia, patriarchal traditions, domestic violence and the role of women, it wanted to know if further measures would be taken to combat prejudices against women. Slovenia welcomed the prohibition of hiring children for cotton harvesting but asked whether Tajikistan prohibited other forms of child labour. Slovenia made recommendations.
 64. Japan commended Tajikistan for its ratification status. It expressed concerns about allegations of torture and stressing the need for awareness-raising, capacity-building and the improvement of the legislation in this area. Despite policy developments, the gender gap continued to persist. Japan made recommendations.
 65. Brazil acknowledged Tajikistan's efforts to reduce poverty, but noted that there was a lack of funding for education, health care and social welfare. It welcomed the moratorium on the death penalty. While positively noting the free public secondary education it observed a decline in the enrolment of girls in schools. Brazil recognized steps taken in the field of gender equality but observed that patriarchal traditions and stereotypes were a structural source of discrimination. Brazil made recommendations.
 66. Bangladesh welcomed the cooperation of Tajikistan with the Human Rights Council mechanisms and its efforts to combat trafficking in person. It also commended the Government for the establishment of the Human Rights Ombudsman Institution and took note of the programmes and initiatives ensuring increased women's participation and equal treatment of women. It also indicated that further progress had to be made in economic areas. Bangladesh made recommendations.
 67. The United States of America commended Tajikistan for its ratification status and efforts to prevent torture. It expressed concern regarding the Parental Responsibility Law and other provisions on religious freedom. It was concerned about continuing attacks on journalists and use of lawsuits against them. It made recommendations.
 68. Saudi Arabia noted that Tajikistan had acceded to most human rights instruments and submitted periodic reports on their implementation, which demonstrated its eagerness to cooperate with the international human rights mechanisms. Saudi Arabia highlighted efforts in the area of education, including steps to improve the quality of primary education. Saudi Arabia made recommendations.

69. Belarus welcomed Tajikistan's commitment to human rights and noted the high number of core human rights treaties ratified by Tajikistan. It acknowledged efforts made by Tajikistan to fight human trafficking. Belarus made recommendations.
70. Spain acknowledged the steps undertaken by Tajikistan to strengthen its legal human rights framework. It positively recognized Tajikistan's accession to most of the international human rights treaties. Spain made recommendations.
71. Afghanistan acknowledged Tajikistan's achievements such as the enhancement of the role of women, adoption of a programme for combating trafficking in person, poverty reduction strategy and calls for reforming the State administration. It made recommendations.
72. Sweden noted positively the status of ratifications of core human rights treaties but requested information on plans to better implement treaty body recommendations. Sweden requested more information on plans to further strengthen the independence of the judiciary. It also sought Tajikistan's view on issues with the access to sources of information including Internet. Sweden made recommendations.
73. Indonesia applauded Tajikistan on its high rate of ratification of human rights instruments, and its efforts to promote equality of ethnic groups and gender equality. However, it expressed concern that patriarchal traditions and stereotypes fostered discrimination against girls. It noted that the fight against torture remained a challenge. Indonesia appealed for further assistance to Tajikistan by the international community. It made recommendations.
74. Argentina acknowledged Tajikistan's efforts regarding human rights issues, such as the adoption of the National Plan of Action for Children (2003-2010), as well as the education on human rights, to which Argentina encouraged Tajikistan to continue paying attention. Argentina made recommendations.
75. Austria asked Tajikistan to elaborate on the measures taken to eliminate practices such as detention of children below fourteen, lack of juvenile courts and punitive measures. It also wanted to know whether additional measures were planned to tackle child labor in agriculture and other informal sectors. Finally, Austria asked what efforts had been undertaken to strengthen the freedom of expression and guarantee the independence of media. It made recommendations.
76. Uruguay acknowledged Tajikistan's adherence to CRC and its optional protocols, ILO Convention No.82, and CEDAW without reservations. It noted the lack of awareness of women's rights, as well as the re-emergence of patriarchal attitudes and stereotypes in rural areas. It acknowledged the campaigns to protect children from ill-treatment, and the establishment of rehabilitation centres for women and children. It was concerned that such activities were limited to certain regions; that corporal punishment was not prohibited by law and was used as a discipline, and complaints that child labour was widely used. Uruguay made recommendations.
77. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland commended Tajikistan for its commitments to human rights, but underlined that progresses could be made, particularly regarding the independence of media and the freedom of religion. It also noted that the correctional system needed an urgent reform and that penal reform required more than the construction of new prisons. It remained concerned by the persistence of torture in pre-trial detention facilities. It made recommendations.
78. Morocco asked about Tajikistan's position on the gender approach in the development policies and about more information on the Program on Youth and its implementation. Morocco made recommendations.

79. Romania noted efforts to combat poverty and commended Tajikistan on the ratification of ICCPR and the law introducing a moratorium on the death penalty. It also noted positively the adoption of acts on women's empowerment and the increasing number of women in public office but pointed to implementation deficiencies reported by treaty bodies. It raised concerns regarding corporal punishment. Romania made recommendations.
80. Malaysia commended Tajikistan for its cooperation with OHCHR and treaty bodies. It also noted the Government's efforts to enhance the socio-economic development of its people, evidenced by its national poverty strategies and the strong emphasis on social infrastructure, public healthcare and education. Malaysia made recommendations.
81. Pakistan was encouraged to note that the Constitution guaranteed the rights and freedoms of every person. It noted that poverty posed a major challenge. It acknowledged steps to provide equal opportunities for men and women and hoped that the State programme for the education, selection and placement of capable women in leadership positions would ensure wider participation of women in the development of society. Pakistan made recommendations.
82. Latvia noted with appreciation Tajikistan's openness and willingness to cooperate with special procedures mandate holders and made a related recommendation.
83. Costa Rica congratulated Tajikistan for the significant reduction of poverty in the last years; the implementation of human rights education, and the moratorium to the death penalty. However, it expressed concern that the death penalty provision was still in force; at discrimination faced by women in practice, and reports of a high number of torture and ill treatments. Costa Rica made recommendations.
84. Mexico acknowledged the Tajikistan's steps to promote universal access to health and public education, as well as to guarantee food security. In particular, it congratulated the decision to apply a moratorium to the death penalty and hoped it will be promptly abolished. Mexico made recommendations.
85. Thailand commended Tajikistan for its cooperation with treaty bodies and the Human Rights Council mechanisms. It also recognised Government's efforts to protect the rights of vulnerable groups and appreciated its guarantee of free health care provisions and the promulgation of the HIV/AIDS Act. Thailand called on the international community to assist Tajikistan to promote and protect human rights. It made recommendations.
86. Belgium noted that the judiciary system was not provided with sufficient guarantees of independence. Belgium made recommendations.
87. Italy asked the Tajik delegation to elaborate on the alleged abuses and violations of human rights during the conscription process and when young people were already serving the military. It shared concerns expressed by the Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion. Italy made recommendations.
