Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review (UPR), established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its twenty-first session from 19 to 30 January 2015. The review of Sweden was held at the 11th meeting on 26 January 2015. The delegation of Sweden was headed by H.E. Ms. Annika Söder, State Secretary, Ministry for Foreign Affairs. At its 17th meeting held on 29 January 2015, the Working Group adopted the report on Sweden.
2. On 13 January 2015, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Sweden: Argentina, Latvia, Republic of Korea.
3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Sweden:
  - (a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/SWE/1);
  - (b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/SWE/2);
  - (c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/SWE/3).
4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Azerbaijan, Belgium, Czech Republic, Ecuador, Israel, Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Sweden through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the UPR.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Swedish delegation stated that promoting and respecting human rights for all is a core value and central priority of the Government. Sweden appreciated that civil society, including organisations representing indigenous peoples and national minorities, had contributed to the preparations for this UPR session.
6. In the Statement of Government Policy of October 2014, the Prime Minister emphasized that racism and prejudices in our society restricted people's lives. Furthermore, the Prime Minister emphasized that there must be no place in Sweden for anti-Semitism, antiziganism, Islamophobia or Afrophobia. Sweden explained that the fight against racism and xenophobia involved awareness raising, Government contributions to non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and continuing dialogue with groups subjected to racism and xenophobia. The Swedish Police was currently carrying out an assignment to develop its efforts to combat hate crime.
7. The delegation stated it was essential to secure the free exchange of opinion. While, freedom of expression and freedom of the press were enshrined in Sweden's Constitution, constitutional laws also clearly regulated against the contents of publications in such a case as the criminal offence of agitation against a national or ethnic group.

8. Sweden stated that combating intolerance, hatred and also violent extremism was a global problem that must be dealt with collectively. The Government had recently appointed a National Coordinator against violent extremism at the national level.
9. Sweden stated that it has a feminist government and that gender equality is to permeate all government policies. The main tool to reach that goal is through gender mainstreaming, as well as enhanced gender budgeting and work to combat violence against women.
10. In 2014, Sweden ratified the Council of Europe's Istanbul Convention and introduced new legislation that strengthened protection against forced marriage and child marriage.
11. Sweden reported that, while the total pay gap between women and men decreased by 3 percentage points between 1994 and 2013, there was still a pay gap in Sweden of around 13 percent. The Government had appointed a Delegation for Gender Equality in Working Life to investigate different conditions for women and men and propose action to promote gender equality and reduce the pay gap.
12. Sweden confirmed that the fight against all forms of discrimination, including multiple discrimination, remained a key objective of the Government.
13. Sweden reported that the Discrimination Act of 2009 was amended on 1 January 2015 to include inadequate accessibility for people with disabilities as a new form of discrimination.
14. Sweden stated that a comprehensive strategy was adopted in 2013 with the purpose of improving and strengthening the situation for LGBT persons in Sweden. A committee of inquiry was currently looking into the question of whether transgender persons should be protected by criminal law provisions on hate crime and hate speech, which already cover the ground of sexual orientation.
15. Strengthening the protection of national minority languages was an element in protecting the rights of Sweden's national minorities.
16. The delegation stated that the work against discrimination of Roma and antiziganism is a priority for the Government. Sweden's national strategy for Roma inclusion from 2012 placed special emphasis on the principle of non-discrimination and on Roma participation and influence for its implementation. A special Commission against antiziganism had been appointed.
17. The delegation reported that in 2013 media exposed a Police register of over 4 000 people. According to media, the register was set up for the main purpose to map individuals on the basis of their Roma background. The investigation conducted by the Commission on Security and Integrity Protection concluded that the processing of personal data by the Police in several aspects was against the law. The Police Authority was commissioned to report to the Government in February 2015 on which measures have been taken to ensure that the legal framework is accurately applied as well as that required guidelines and administrative practices are in place to avoid any discrimination. Regarding entitlement to compensation to affected individuals, about 3000 applications for compensation had already been approved.
18. Since 2011 the Swedish Constitution explicitly recognized the Sami as a people. In 2011, Sweden, Norway and Finland initiated negotiations on a Nordic Sami Convention.
19. In 2010 the Sami Parliament's right to participate in municipal planning and to monitor consideration of Sami needs, including reindeer husbandry interests in land and water use, was extended. Furthermore the Minerals Act and Ordinance was amended in 2014 so as to increase Sami involvement in the process of issuing permits for exploration for minerals.

20. Referring to mental health challenges facing reindeer herders, primarily an increased risk for suicide, the Government acknowledged that there was a need for more efforts in order to reduce such risks and a number of proposals were being looked into.

21. Sweden constantly sought ways to strengthen the rights of the child, including the rights of children to express their views on issues that concern them. Since October 2014, preparatory work concerning the incorporation of the CRC into Swedish legislation has been prioritized by the Government.

22. The delegation explained that in 2014 approximately 7000 unaccompanied minors applied for asylum in Sweden and the best interest of the child shall always be taken into account. The Swedish Migration Board worked actively to trace the minor's parents or other guardians.

23. More than 6000 persons under the age of 18, with residence in Sweden, were stateless. The delegation noted that the recognition of the State of Palestine would give most of those children citizenship. Amendments to the Swedish Citizenship Act, with the purpose of reducing statelessness, would enter into force on 1 April 2015.

24. The delegation stated that in Sweden pre-trial detention and restrictions should only be used when necessary and proportionate. The reasons for the detention were regularly reviewed. It was important that the length of the pre-trial detention was kept as short as possible and that only necessary restrictions were used. The Prosecution Authority and the Prison and Probation Service were both taking steps to reduce the isolation of detainees.

25. The Government was also examining ways of improving the overall situation for young offenders, including finding ways to ease any solitary confinement of young detainees.

26. Sweden reported that it combine strong protection of the rights of the individual with efforts to prevent any interference with the right to privacy. The Foreign Intelligence Act and the Signals Intelligence Act contained mechanisms of legal security and control to ensure that the requirement of integrity protection was met.

27. The delegation stated that signals intelligence at the National Defence Radio Establishment was conducted within the detailed framework of Swedish legislation, under strict judicial control and with parliamentary oversight. The Government reported to the Parliament annually through a written communication on the signals surveillance conducted under the Act. This system aimed at safeguarding that signals intelligence was carried out in accordance with the national legislation protecting privacy as well as with Sweden's obligations under international human rights law.

28. On the issue of investigations on alleged police misconduct, Sweden referred to the establishment of an independent and separate Department of Special Investigations within the Police at the national level on 1 January 2015.

29. Sweden reported that the Government in its budget bill for 2015 announced that it intended to deliver to Parliament a systematic strategy for human rights work in Sweden, one important aspect of which is to set out how independent monitoring of the implementation of human rights in Sweden could be organized.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

30. During the interactive dialogue, 89 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

38. Costa Rica highlighted the adoption of the new Law on Criminal Responsibility for Genocide, Crimes against Humanity and War Crimes, and shared CERD's concern at the reported increase of racially motivated hate speech against minorities.
39. Poland acknowledged efforts taken to implement the recommendations of the first UPR cycle and noted that adoption of the Law on Crimes Against Humanity in 2014 was an important step in the fight against torture.
40. Portugal commended Sweden's efforts to combat all kinds of discrimination, especially against minorities, and to promote equality. In that regard, the establishment of an Equality Ombudsman was noted.
41. Qatar welcomed the 2010 strategy for strengthening child rights, the new action plan for protection of children against human trafficking, exploitation and sexual assault and education programmes that incorporated the rights of the child.
42. Romania commended Sweden for its mid-term report, and positively noted Sweden's approval of the Istanbul Convention, adoption of the Strategy on Roma inclusion 2012-2013 and the setting-up of the commission against anti-gypsyism.
43. The Russian Federation was concerned at the unlawful use of force by the police and xenophobic rhetoric against national and religious minorities. It also noted the growth in crimes of hatred, racism and xenophobia.
44. Rwanda commended measures combatting discrimination and boosting knowledge of xenophobia amongst minors; and efforts to promote gender equality and salary parity. It noted appreciation for the conviction of Stanislas Mbanenande for the crime of genocide in Rwanda.
45. Senegal welcomed the steps taken by Sweden to withdraw reservations to international human rights instruments and the adoption of legislative measures to protect unaccompanied children as well as to combat trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation of children.

46. Serbia commended the establishment of the Equality Ombudsman's office. Serbia encouraged continued efforts to promote the integration of migrants and to strengthen cooperation with civil society with a view to reinforcing the influence of migrants in society.

47. Sierra Leone commended Sweden for its human rights record and support to developing countries through foreign direct assistance. Sierra Leone urged Sweden to further promote religious tolerance and social integration among various ethnic groups and immigrant communities in Sweden.

48. Slovakia commended Sweden for prioritizing its human rights policy, acknowledged its gender equality activities and its initiatives to combat anti-gypsism. Slovakia encouraged Sweden to implement CAT's recommendations on legal safeguards for persons deprived of their liberty.

49. Slovenia welcomed Sweden's assistance through development cooperation. Slovenia noted the challenges of hate crime, intolerant political discourse and a persistent gender pay gap and some concern over mass interception of communications on the right to privacy.

50. Spain welcomed measures adopted on children's rights, in response to recommendations made by Spain in 2010, and welcomed efforts taken to better protect the rights of persons with disabilities.

51. Sri Lanka appreciated implementation of a 2014 action plan for the protection of children from trafficking and sexual exploitation, the priority accorded to gender equality and efforts to strengthen protection against discrimination.

52. The State of Palestine welcomed the efforts made to combat discrimination and xenophobia and to address the gender wage gap as well as the appointment of special hate crimes investigators.

53. The Sudan commended Sweden's ratification of most United Nations core conventions on human rights and the adoption of two national plans of action for human rights.

54. Thailand commended the progress made to incorporate international human rights obligations into national legislation. It welcomed the establishment of the Office of the Equality Ombudsman and noted that hate crime and online racism continued to proliferate.

55. The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia noted that the Swedish Foreign Ministry held regular and frequent meetings on human rights issues with civil society organizations. It commended Sweden's contribution to international development.

56. Timor-Leste recognized Sweden's commitment to making human rights protection a priority and appreciated the Strategy for Roma Inclusion 2012-2032, the special hate crime investigator, and strengthened measures to combat trafficking.

57. Togo noted that despite progress in the fight against discrimination difficulties remained regarding racism, that often targeted persons with a migrant background and Swedes of African descent, which required new measures to better protect persons targeted by discrimination, racism, and xenophobia.

58. Tunisia welcomed Sweden's pioneering role in promoting and protecting human rights and freedom of expression on the internet. Tunisia noted measures to implement UPR recommendations particularly the adoption of human rights action plans and welcomed Sweden's asylum policies.

59. Turkey praised achievements in human rights; especially in prevention of violence against women and ratification of the Istanbul Convention. It was concerned about racially motivated and/or religiously intolerant hate speech and an increase in associated crimes.
60. Ukraine commended the strength of human rights protections in Sweden and cited domestic implementation via national action plans. It lauded open consultations with civil society organizations; as well as cooperation with international mechanisms and institutions.
61. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland recognized Sweden's prioritization of human rights. It acknowledged protections against discrimination but recognized outstanding challenges impacting vulnerable groups, including the Roma; and urged enhanced protections for stateless persons.
62. The United States of America lauded Sweden's commitment to human rights and leadership in promoting Internet freedoms. However it noted reports of discrimination against certain ethnic and religious minorities; and was concerned by insufficient training for judges investigating human trafficking.
63. Uzbekistan commended the national action plans, the Equality Ombudsman and a strategy for the Roma. However, it noted concerns expressed by UN treaty bodies about hate speech on racial and religious grounds, coercive treatment of persons with mental disabilities and industrial activities in traditional Sami territory.
64. Albania welcomed constitutional protections against discrimination including on the ground of sexual orientation; and ratification of the Istanbul Convention. Albania noted with satisfaction budget allocations for the sustainable protection of human rights, particularly for organizations working in the disability sector.
65. Algeria appreciated Sweden's participatory approach with civil society in the drafting of the national report. Algeria commended the adoption of two Action Plans and encouraged the adoption of a third. It encouraged the creation of a new national human rights institution in compliance with the Paris Principles.
66. Angola welcomed the measures taken to raise awareness of children and adolescents on xenophobia and similar forms of intolerance. It noted Sweden's efforts to comply with its international commitments in the protection of the rights of vulnerable persons, particularly migrants.
67. Argentina welcomed Sweden for the new Action Plan 2014-2015 for the protection of children against human trafficking, sexual exploitation and sexual assault and for the legislative efforts made to combat discrimination.
68. Armenia lauded ongoing measures for gender equality; alongside provisions for children and persons with disabilities. It further commended protection of the rights of national minorities as well as the free exercise of the cultural and religious rights of persons of Armenian origin living in Sweden.
69. Australia praised consistent respect for human rights and civil liberties; specifically promotion of gender equality and elimination of violence against women. It commended the Inquiry commissioned in 2014 to consider a specific provision on criminalizing torture in Swedish law.
70. Austria commended Sweden's commitment to the global advancement of human rights. Austria remained concerned at reports of discrimination against the Sami; particularly relating to land rights, water and resources. It referred to CERD's concern at increased reports of racially motivated hate speech and hate crimes.

71. Azerbaijan noted concerns expressed by some UN treaty bodies about discrimination, xenophobia and racist attitudes against Muslims, Afro-Swedes, Roma and Jews, attacks against the places of worship of religious minorities and the increasingly high rate of suicide among persons with disabilities.

72. Replying to comments made and questions raised, Sweden stated that it had extensive legislation in place which can be used to punish various expressions of racism, xenophobia, religious intolerance, homophobia and transphobia. The assignment given to the Police aimed at improving the rate of resolved hate crime cases and that report would be followed upon.

73. The delegation reported that most penal provisions relevant in combating hate speech and hate crime also applied to crimes committed online.

74. In relation to the recent incidents of suspected attacks against Swedish Mosques, Swedish police prioritized investigations to find those responsible and bring them to justice. Dialogue between the police and religious organizations needed to intensify. The Government had invited representatives from the Muslim community to a round-table talk on Islamophobia in Europe in early 2015.

75. The Government had invited representatives from the Jewish community to discuss issues of anti-Semitism, and additional funds had been allocated for enhanced security measures to protect the Jewish community in Sweden.

76. Concerning anti-ziganism, a White Paper on abuses and violations against Roma during the 20th century was presented last year, and a Commission against anti-ziganism was appointed.

77. As the largest number of reported hate crimes was for Afrophobia, the Government intended to give the Equality Ombudsman an assignment to carry out awareness-raising measures during 2015 and 2016.

78. Independent studies concluded that Sweden fulfils the requirements set out in ILO Convention 169 in most respects; and the main stumbling block was the rights of ownership and possession over lands, and reindeer grazing rights. Sweden reported that the issue of land rights was also addressed in the Draft Nordic Sami Convention, and the Government hoped that this process could be a catalyst to finding a solution to outstanding issues.

79. Regarding the issue of a National Human Rights Institution, Sweden had assessed that national action plans for human rights was an appropriate method of work. The two Committees of Enquiry regarding the systematic work on human rights and their recommendations as well as the follow up of the UPR, would constitute the basis for Sweden's deliberations on how to deliver a system where independent monitoring of the implementation of human rights could take place. The delegation reported that the Swedish Local Authorities and Regions Association have made an agreement with the Government about strengthening human rights at work at the local level, and the Government has adopted a decision about supporting Sweden's country boards to work with human rights.

80. In Sweden, the age of criminal responsibility was 15 years. A person under the age of 18 could only be placed in detention if there were extraordinary reasons for detention. Sweden would report to CAT on the legal safeguards for minors in detention by November 2015.

81. Sweden had established a Government Committee to look through the possibility of having a special criminal provision on torture, and would present a report in September 2015.

82. Sweden signed the International Convention on the Protection of Persons from Enforced Disappearance in 2007 and the question of its ratification was on its agenda but work on ratification had not yet started.
83. The delegation confirmed that there was no general obligation under international law to recognize diplomatic asylum.
84. Bahrain noted the measures taken to combat trafficking in persons and uphold the rights of victims and also welcomed the initiatives to raise awareness among students on the danger of xenophobia. Bahrain asked about the plan to improve access to education by migrant families.

116. The Islamic Republic of Iran expressed serious concerns over racist and xenophobic crimes against Roma and Sinti, and crimes against minorities, targeting of Muslims with harassment, verbal threats, sabotage and vandalism.

117. Ireland commended Sweden's strong commitment to human rights, the rule of law and freedom of media. Ireland noted that functions of the Ombudsman for Children did not include the power to accept individual complaints.

118. Israel congratulated Sweden for its leading work on promoting the human rights of the SOGI community. It echoed concerns by the Office of the Children's Ombudsman, particularly on the human rights of children deprived of their liberty in remand prisons and police cells.

119. Italy noted concerns on the lack of a broader mandate for the Equality Ombudsman. It welcomed the measures taken to safeguard children from sexual exploitation, and noted concerns on the low level of public awareness of child sex tourism.

120. Kuwait noted the challenges in fighting discrimination and welcomed the establishment of Equality Ombudsman to fight against all forms of discrimination against vulnerable groups, particularly, foreigners and refugees.

121. Lebanon welcomed Sweden's efforts to adopt international standards and develop national legislation. It commended numerous initiatives combatting discrimination and xenophobia as reflecting commitment to strengthening human rights and democratic values.
122. Libya noted that despite considerable progress made in various areas, some challenges in the human rights area still remained; in particular in fighting discrimination.
123. Lithuania encouraged Sweden to exchange its experience with other countries that were seeking progress in the area of human rights protection. It recognized the steps taken to ensure the protection of children by introducing a new crime into the Penal Code in 2009.
124. Malaysia acknowledged progress including in promoting and protecting the rights of persons with disabilities. Malaysia noted the Government's dialogue with religious associations to combat xenophobia and religious intolerance and that Sweden still faced challenges of racism, intolerance, Islamophobia and xenophobic attitudes towards non-citizens and other minorities.
125. Trinidad and Tobago welcomed adoption of the plan against human trafficking. Trinidad and Tobago believed that further work was needed to combat discrimination against minorities and to enhance the rights of disabled persons.
126. Uruguay welcomed the elaboration of a third human rights plan. The establishment of a national human rights institution would support human rights achievements. Uruguay stated that the humanitarian situation and rights of any person sought by the Government should be considered and protected.
127. The Republic of Moldova asked about the findings of the Interim Report of the Committee of inquiry on compulsory residential care for children and adolescents recommending the introduction of a new form of care home for unaccompanied children. It noted the successful implementation of the second human rights action plan.
128. South Africa commended the successful implementation of some UPR recommendations and encouraged Sweden to continue all efforts towards the promotion, protection and fulfilment of all human rights, including the right to development.
129. The Philippines recognized Sweden's important contribution in migration and development and lauded Sweden for amending its anti-discrimination laws to make it easier for victims to seek redress. The Philippines was interested in knowing about initiatives to safeguard the rights of the Sami and Roma.
130. Mexico welcomed the recognition of Sami as an indigenous population and efforts to promote awareness of xenophobia and other forms of intolerance in children and adolescents. It encouraged Sweden to continue combating racist, xenophobic, Islamophobic or anti-Semitic propaganda.
131. Ghana commended Sweden's commitment to the UPR process. Ghana referred to the legacy of Raoul Wallenberg regarding protection of minorities; whilst noting human rights concerns expressed by the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and the Committee against Torture.
132. Sweden stated that, while racist organisations could exist in Sweden, racist actions were criminalized.
133. Implementation of the Strategy of Roma Inclusion was characterized by Roma influence and participation.
134. Sweden had allocated a considerable amount of money including to - shelters in order to implement all measures to end men's violence against women, violence and oppression in the name of honour, violence in same sex relationships, including FGM as well as child marriages and forced marriages.

135. Sweden stated that in 2012, the Government appointed a National Coordinator for Violence in Close Relationships. Sweden expected the final report in May 2015 of the Committee of Enquiry to develop a national strategy to achieve the aim of ending men's violence against women.

136. If business did not live up to the commitment of applying quotas for women in business, the Government might consider legislating on that matter.

137. Sweden referred to its proactive role in abolishing corporal punishment against children in Sweden and internationally. Sweden planned to create a national knowledge centre on Violence against children to coordinate, compile knowledge and support actors in work against corporal punishment.

138. Child poverty was highly prioritized by the Government and some county administrative boards supported local authorities in producing action plans suited to local conditions to deal with child poverty.

139. Sweden was the country in Europe receiving the highest number of asylum seeking unaccompanied children. In 2014, 87 percent of unaccompanied minors were granted residence permits. Sweden, per capita, received more refugees than any other European Union country.

140. The principle of non-refoulement had long been a part of Swedish asylum law. Refusal of entry or expulsion may never be enforced if the person would be in danger of suffering the death penalty or torture.

141. The delegation confirmed that it was not possible to accede to International Convention on the Rights of Migrant Workers and members of their families.

142. Regarding questions against human trafficking, the delegation stated that Sweden in 2014 presented an Action Plan for the Protection of Children against Human Trafficking, Exploitation and Sexual Assaults.

143. Sweden reported that the Swedish Foreign Intelligence Inspectorate had the task to verify and monitor that the defence intelligence authorities followed the Foreign Intelligence Act. The Foreign Intelligence Court was a special court hearing the application for permits to conduct signals intelligence. All signal intelligence that a national defence radio establishment might conduct required a permit from the Foreign Intelligence Court which had the aim to limit intrusions in individual privacy.

144. In closing, Sweden thanked all delegations that asked questions and made recommendations. The Universal Periodic Review was an important opportunity to reflect on the human rights situation in Sweden. Sweden was proud of the progress made and also saw the UPR process as an opportunity to improve. Sweden would carefully consider the recommendations made. Sweden would continue to engage with civil society and reflect on the UPR process and consider how recommendations could best be addressed and implemented. Sweden would have inter-ministerial consultations to follow up on the dialogue and the recommendations.
